National Center for Healthcare Leadership Names New Board Members

Chicago, May 2, 2016 — The National Center for Healthcare Leadership (NCHL) said the following healthcare executives have been named to three-year terms on its board of directors:

- Delvecchio Finley, Chief Executive Officer, Alameda Health, Oakland, CA
- Marie E Michnich, DrPH, Director, Health Policy Education Programs & Fellowships, National Academy of Medicine, Washington, DC
- Jill Schwieters, President, Cielo Healthcare, Brookfield, WI
- Maryjane Wurth, Chief Strategy & Relationship Officer, American Hospital Association and President & Chief Executive Office, Health Forum, Chicago, IL

NCHL also said that its founder Gail L. Warden, who is president emeritus at Henry Ford Health System, will now serve as Senior Advisor to the NCHL Board.

“At a time of extraordinary and rapid change in healthcare, we are fortunate to add new board members who bring great expertise, diverse experiences and backgrounds, and thought leadership to our organization,” NCHL President and Chair Tim Rice said. “They will provide valuable guidance to the expansion of NCHL’s collaborative efforts, promoting evidence-based leadership practices that aim to improve the health of our communities and recognize leadership and organizational excellence in our field.”
